

DSOM

SOUTH CAROLINA

What is SCDSOM?

The South Carolina District School of Ministry is a convenient, fast track and inexpensive way to satisfy basic academic requirements for ministerial credentials with the Assemblies of God and to provide quality ministry education for staff and members of local congregations.

What are the advantages of SC DSOM?

Our program of studies provides personal accountability and a unique classroom environment guided by a select faculty that promotes exchange of ideas, focused dialogue, and exposure to differing perspectives on various subject matters.

How do I get my textbooks?

Students are responsible to obtain all required class materials. You may find our most recent textbook list on our website.

How do I prepare for class?

Upon enrollment, a study guide will be provided via email. Allow yourself about one month for pre-classroom preparation. This will allow enough time to read all required materials, answer all study guide questions, and study time for the exam. All final exam questions will be based on your study guide.

Will I automatically receive credentials?

SCDSOM does not grant ministerial credentials. The SCAG Office provides a credential application and approval process. Our courses satisfy all basic academic standards for credentialing. For more information please contact Michelle at michelle.sandler@ag4sc.com.

SC DSOM is endorsed by the National DSOM Association of the Assemblies of God.
